Palomar Health is dedicated to living out its mission through community benefit activities such as charity care, subsidized health services, education, flu vaccination clinics and the work undertaken by the Palomar Health Community Action Councils.

As a public health district, Palomar Health received $13.1 million from annual property taxes in fiscal year 2013 (FY13), while returning more than $131 million to the community through health improvement programs and services. Palomar Health focuses on the following four areas of community benefit:

- Unreimbursed Medical Care Services – Palomar Health cares for individuals in need through hospital services as well as through community programs, by providing financial assistance to persons who have health care needs and are uninsured, underinsured, ineligible for a government program or are otherwise unable to pay for medically necessary care based on their financial situation.

- Community Action Councils (CACs) – The CACs help Palomar Health monitor the pulse of the community’s health needs by working with community members to identify, address and advocate for the health care needs of our communities through collaboration and partnerships.

- Community Health Benefits for the Broader Community – Palomar Health provides a wide variety of health benefits to the community through outreach programs including health education and information, and participation in community health fairs and events addressing the unique needs of the community, plus providing flu vaccinations and health screenings.

- Health Education and Training Programs – By providing opportunities to learn about the healthcare field through internships/externships, sponsorship of classes and other training programs, Palomar Health helps ensure that future patients will have quality care they need.

This report features a snapshot of some of the community benefit programs offered by Palomar Health in FY13, as well as selected stories that highlight the impact of Palomar Health’s outreach.
Making Sure No One Goes Without Care

Lack of access to basic health care is a serious issue for some in our community. Palomar Health is committed to providing financial assistance to persons who have health care needs and are uninsured, underinsured, ineligible for a government program or are otherwise unable to pay for medically necessary care based on their individual financial situations. Consistent with its mission to heal, comfort and promote health in the communities we serve, Palomar Health strives to ensure that the financial capacity of people who need health care services does not prevent them from seeking or receiving care.

As a reflection of our commitment to the community, Palomar Health provided unreimbursed medical services including uncompensated care for patients who are unable to pay for services and the unreimbursed costs of public programs such as Medi-Cal, Medicare, San Diego County Indigent Medical Services (CMS) and the Low Income Health Program (LIHP).

Caught in the Cycle

In early 2013 Jerry Smith* was referred to Palomar Health’s patient financial services department. Mr. Smith had been in and out of Palomar Health’s facilities 4-5 times a month, preventing him from working and as a result, struggling to pay his medical bills.

“Jerry had been unable to work for the past year due to health issues … His elderly mother, Mrs. Smith, who handled all his finances as well as her own, was strained and worried when I spoke with her about her son’s medical bills.

“After talking and working with the two of them, we were able to successfully approve Jerry for 100% charity care alleviating the stress regard medical debt to both Jerry and his mother. I am still in contact with Mrs. Smith on a weekly basis and am happy to report that they are now able to focus on Jerry’s recovery. This situation is the kind that makes me truly proud to work at Palomar Health.”

Palomar Medical Center has proudly served as San Diego County’s designated Trauma Center for North County for more than 25 years. The Center cares for all trauma patients, regardless of ability to pay, within the 2,200 square mile trauma region east of Interstate Highway 5 and north of State Route 56.
Since 1992, Palomar Health’s Community Action Councils (CACs) have played an active role as a leader, partner and supporter of the communities we serve. The Councils work to improve the health of Palomar Health communities; create, implement and evaluate programs that promote health; advocate for policies that promote healthy environments and wellness; build relationships with key leaders; and educate residents about health-related community resources.

The five regional Councils bring together leaders from more than 75 agencies including local governments, social services, law enforcement, health agencies, schools, community clinics, senior centers, faith communities, businesses and community members.

The Council’s special committees develop programs that focus on major health issues affecting the community including: Mental Health and Substance Abuse Prevention, Obesity and Diabetes Prevention and Access to Health Care. These issues grow out of the health concerns voiced by the community and the tri-annual San Diego County Health Needs Assessment.
Palomar Health’s Community Action Councils are a shining example of how hospital systems can interact with the community beyond the walls of its hospitals to address the community’s health concerns.

Community Provides Produce for Families in Need

The Backyard Produce Project, created by Poway/Rancho Bernardo/Rancho Peñasquitos Community Action Council (CAC), epitomizes Palomar Health’s commitment to the community’s needs.

At a meeting of the Poway/Rancho Bernardo/Rancho Peñasquitos CAC when the economy turned toward recession in 2008, an area school counselor shared a serious issue she had been seeing in her students.

“She told us that with the change in the economy, family resources had shifted to basic needs: food, clothing and shelter,” said Nancy Roy, community outreach liaison at Palomar Health. “And as a result many students and their families were not getting enough food, especially fruits and vegetables.”

Recognizing that many area residents grew produce, CAC members proposed and then created a drop-off site where people could donate their excess homegrown fruits and vegetables. The site became a launching pad for the Backyard Produce Project. Locals brought their excess crops to collection sites where CAC volunteers gathered and delivered the produce to Friends & Family Community Connection which distributes the food to more than 400 families in need each month.

“Once we put out the word, asking people to donate their excess fruits and vegetables, I started getting calls from people saying, ‘I have citrus. You can have it if you will come pick it,’” said project chairwoman Jane Radatz. “So we created tree picking teams to go harvest that produce.”

The Backyard Produce Project expanded again when the Sunshine Care Assisted Living Facility donated land for organic gardens. Palomar Health provided the seed money to get the gardens started and members of the CAC mobilized to create three organic garden sites to grow vegetables for donation.

In the five years since program started, the Backyard Produce Project has collected more than 100,000 pounds of produce. Through a partnership with Friends and Family Community Connection, the Backyard Produce Project provides the fresh produce to families in need.

“The families we work with are truly grateful for food period,” says Becky Palenske of the Friends and Family Community Connection. “But it is amazing to watch their eyes light up when they see fresh-picked fruits and vegetables.”

“This project is exactly the type of work Palomar Health aspires to do through the CACs,” said Roy. “We identified a need, found a solution and now the community has taken it and run with it.”
Palomar Health’s commitment to our community stretches far beyond the walls of the hospital facilities. Through community health programs such as screenings, Ask-A-Nurse forums, health education, support groups and community influenza vaccination clinics, Palomar Health raises public awareness for and understanding of many pertinent health needs.

Spearheaded by our community health education nurse, Palomar Health organizes a highly successful community influenza vaccination program. During the 2013 flu season, Palomar Health hosted 104 vaccination clinics at various locations throughout the hospital district including churches, senior centers, mobile housing parks, community centers, street fairs, libraries and our own hospital locations. More than 3,200 people received the “flu shot” at the 2013 clinics.

Palomar Health also offered more than 180 health education classes teaching about a wide variety of topics ranging from heart healthy diets to medication safety, as well as free monthly blood pressure, body composition and blood glucose screenings throughout the community.

Reaching Beyond Our Walls

One Flu Shot at a Time

Palomar Health’s community health nurse and coordinator of the influenza vaccination program, Luanne Arrangio-Law, is passionate about getting a flu shot. And she’s known to be pretty persuasive – just ask Douglas Dennis.

Dennis, a 59-year-old resident of Warner Springs, had always been hesitant to get a flu shot.

“The thought of putting a virus inside of you to prevent another virus didn’t make any sense to me,” said Dennis.

In November 2012, Dennis happened to visit the Warner Community Center on the same day as a Palomar Health “Flu Clinic” and met Luanne.

“I was hesitant, telling her I hadn’t ever gotten one before and didn’t think I needed one now,” explained Dennis. “But Luanne was insistent. She kept telling me how important it was to get one and she finally convinced me.”

This fall, when Luanne returned to Warner Springs for another clinic she ran into Dennis. “He came up to me like he was upset,” said Luanne. “Before I could say anything, he said, ‘You made me get my flu shot last year. And I thought, ‘Uh oh.’”

“But then he broke into a smile saying, ‘And I was the only person in my neighborhood who didn’t get sick last year.’”

Within a week of getting his flu shot, Dennis’s neighbors began getting ill. “It started down the street from me and worked its way up. Even my roommate got sick. But I was fine. I felt very fortunate to be the only one not to get the flu.”

When asked if he had gotten his flu shot for this season, Dennis replied, “Yeah, I’m a believer now!”
As the demand for healthcare continues to rise, so too will the demand for healthcare workers. Palomar Health is committed to the healthcare workforce of tomorrow through programs today. By providing opportunities to learn about the healthcare field through internships, pharmacy residencies, class sponsorship and other training programs, Palomar Health helps ensure that future patients will have the quality care they need.

Palomar Health’s Pathmaker internship provides hands-on experience to high school and college students interested in healthcare careers. The competency-based program allows students to gain hands-on experience and explore diverse career paths under the guidance of Palomar Health staff. Hours accumulated through the Pathmaker internship often provide students with a running start for educational programs ranging from nursing to medical tech to physician assistant.

In 2006, Palomar Health provided California State University, San Marcos, with a grant of $2.5 million to help create the school’s Bachelors of Science in Nursing program. Palomar Health continues to support the nurses of tomorrow by providing instructional and administration facilities, as well as hosting clinical rotations in virtually all clinical areas of the hospitals. Nursing staff from Palomar Health are also regular presenters and lecturers for the program.

Matt Lilien didn’t know he wanted to work in healthcare right away. It wasn’t until after his successes as a chef and sommelier led to increasing time behind a desk that he realized he needed a career change.

“I really have a great interest in science, but I also really like interacting with people,” said Lilien. “Nursing fit both my passion for science and my desire to work with people.”

After enrolling in pre-requisite courses for nursing school, Matt began looking for an internship program that would give him some clinical experience.

“I did a lot of research on internship opportunities and the Pathmaker program at Palomar Health is by far the best one in the region for clinical experience.”

Lilien joined the program and within his first day as an intern at Palomar Medical Center, knew this was where he wanted to be.

“There was an element of the unknown for me when I decided to start down the nursing path because I had absolutely no clinical experience,” said Lilien. “But that first day on the floor as an intern, affirmed for me that I had made the right decision.”

Today, Lilien is in his second year as an intern, working with patients on the hospital floor and as a supervisor of the interns working in the ICU at Pomerado Hospital.

“The Pathmaker internship has given me skills and perspective that has been a huge leg up in my nursing program,” said Lilien. “It introduced me to the many situations you face as a nurse – both the fascinating and the less glamorous parts. Those experiences have helped me breeze through areas of my nursing program that have tripped up my classmates, allowing me to concentrate on the important clinical areas.

“I am a true believer that this place has given me something that I cannot repay – an opportunity to become the best nurse I can be.”
